GRIMSLEY

MOSAIC

A hand moved over the earth and directed the winds
To drive before themselves
A multitude of particles.
Some were to be as flashing as cut-glass crystal,
Others as quiet and unstartling as clover
In a country pasture.
Yet, all — common and distinctive alike — were to Become one — a unified whole — a good
Thing for all involved.
So a frame was built and the glue spread thick,
And each particle as it came by was Constructed into the frame.
Some found their niches easily, others
Were prodded, and those with obstinate wills
Were hammered in determinedly.
The chaff mingled with the precious, the
Scintillating sparkled beside the dull —
Still they were one.

And the years went as quickly as old leaves
In the spring, and the particles became
A mosaic of thought, a feeling.
Sometimes the mosaic was goodness and harmony.
Sometimes it was discord, and sadness;
Sometimes, the chill of apathy.
But most often light played across
The bits of mosaic, enriching their colors
And vanquishing their shadows.
Then, one day the particles broke loose from
The frame for they had to move on to new things
As all things must do.
The winds snatched them in their grasp
And scattered them as so many grains of rice
To seek fertile ground.

Once they had been one, a mosaic, glued by Common spirit. Now the physical remnants are Gone, but the goodness lingers on.

Miss Powell's concern for each student is evident in the way she listens.

"Duty is the sublimest word in our language. Do your duty in all things. You cannot do more. You should never wish to do less."

—Robert E. Lee

Duty is something with which Miss Virginia Powell is very familiar. As both English teacher and WHIRLIGIG advisor, she has had a large burden of responsibilities which she has always completed successfully.

For twenty-five years, Miss Powell has taught English at Grimsley High School; during this time, a myriad of students have profited from this excellent and impartial teacher. Whether puzzled by a difficult grammar rule or struggling through a comprehensive study of Julius Caesar, her students have discovered that this dedicated instructor is always happy to help with a problem.

This year is also the milestone of Miss Powell's twenty-first year as WHIRLIGIG advisor. Anyone who has a conception of the long, exacting work that is poured into a yearbook can easily realize that Miss Powell's tenure as advisor is a feat few people could accomplish. Even during the busiest part of the GHS annual's season, she has remained unruffled and eager to produce the best book possible. Without her suggestions, understanding and toleration of even the most procrastinating staff members, many a Grimsley yearbook may never have gone to press.

Miss Powell, a warm, sincere, "caring" individual, has indeed provided unremunerative services for our school. Grimsley is indebted to her and, in appreciation, we wish to dedicate this 1972 WHIRLIGIG to her. She has always performed her duties. She could not have done more. She has never wished to do less.

The "duty" that Miss Powell, above, always performs is proof reading all pages of the various sections to make corrections and suggestions. Three heads, right, are better than one to compose a catchy style of copy for the club section.

GLUE

"... and the glue spread thick."

The radiators steam and the heat becomes
  Oppressive—and the teacher seems oppressive—
    And so does school itself.
The bits of the mosaic sit, more or less quietly,
  While the teacher tries to lead them all
    To the water trough of knowledge.
A few drink the lesson in gulps, their faces
  Animated, their waving arms stirring
    The layer of stagnant atmosphere.
The majority are reluctant to partake
  Of the knowledge waters, florinated
    Against the cavities of un-facts.
They lounge or lie dormant on their desks,
  Their heads cradled in their arms,
    Faces blissful in their sleep.
Those suffering from insomnia creatively
  Snap gum, and display their aviation talents
    With hand-propelled paper planes.
The period drags on—a + b = c still and Lee
  Surrenders to Grant again—and everyone's
    Ear is tuned for the bell.
The bell rings, and everyone wakes up
  And rushes out, some lips unmoistened
    By the knowledge waters.

It is a pity—some are thirsty and they don't Even know it. But tomorrow's freshly
    New, and maybe tomorrow . . .

Greensboro Board of Education adapts to desegregation orde

From late April, 1971, to well into the 1971-72 school year, actions concerning the Greensboro School Board were among the most important topics of local area interest. This was, of course, due to the controversy over the elimination of freedom-of-choice in the city's public schools and to the establishment of a new desegregation plan.

After last April's Supreme Court decision in the Charlotte-Mecklenburg case, many people forecast that Greensboro's freedom-of-choice method was earmarked for extinction. And this indeed proved correct. In May, 1971, by order of the late Federal District Judge Edward Stanley, the school board drew up a plan to more fully desegregate the school system. In June a compromise was worked out to give roughly a 70-30 white-black ratio in the schools.

The summer of 1971 was filled with much preparation for the upcoming transition. There were a multitude of problems — more buses and federal aid were needed, there were many changes in teacher and student assignments, and there were a number of irate parents. However, many individuals as well as civic and municipal organizations helped to promote a positive attitude. The school year began and continued to be peaceful.

Among the other important issues with which the board dealt, one which was very interesting to GHS students was the exam policy for the four senior highs. Generally those whose average for the semester was a B could exempt the exam — an added incentive for achievement.

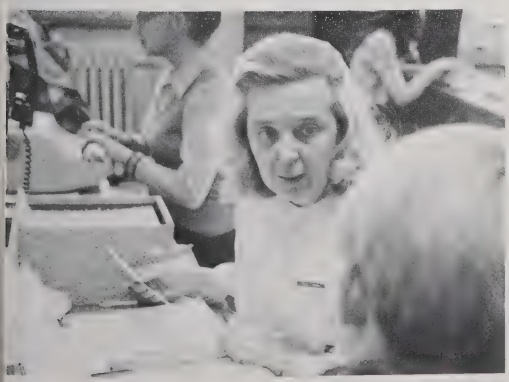
Parents, teachers, students united for progressive action



To strenghten the ties between the home and school and to improve and promote freer communication between the two are the primary concerns of the Parents-Teachers-Students Association. The organization does this in several ways, including a special annual PTSA meeting. At this meeting, parents hurry about the Grimsley campus following their childrens' schedule. Each of their son and daughter's teachers gives a course summary of what is happening in the course and then converses with the parents until the bell signals them to move on to the next classroom.

This year, PTSA helped ease the desegregation situation by holding pre-school open houses to enable new students and their parents to get acquainted with Grimsley. In addition, PTSA mothers took turns as volunteer workers in the school health room. The organization also sponsored various workshops for the parents.

PTSA took on its own special responsibility, the duty of ensuring that Grimsley's general facilities were improved.

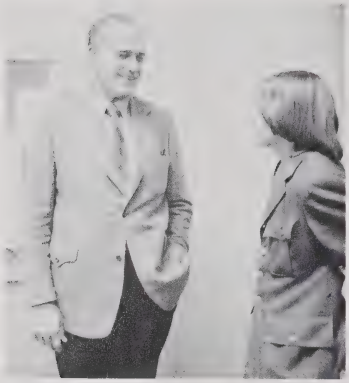
GHS Principal Glenn keeps the school running smoothly

One can often find Mr. Glenn chatting with a student.



Office assistant Wanda Tatro gives Mr. Glenn, above, a letter to sign. One of the functions of the school which Mr. and Mrs. Glenn, below, enjoy attending is the annual Senior Tea.

Being a principal of a large school such as Grimsley is ordinarily a very demanding job and this year, Mr. Robert L. Glenn found it even more so. Due to the implementation of the new desegregation plan, Mr. Glenn had to plan for this school year without knowing how many teachers and students were coming or what courses were needed. He had much paper work to complete and had to spend more hours working outside school than in previous years.

But despite heavy work burdens, Mr. Glenn still had time for the students. His office was always open for Whirlies to come in and talk over problems. Students liked his friendly, "down-home" manner and way of giving a pleasant greeting to everyone he saw.

Mr. Glenn was very pleased that this year, in terms of the desegregation transition, went well. He gave "all the credit to the students for the absence of trouble." Student enrollment, he said, was down three hundred, but classes were still crowded, as the number of teachers was reduced.

Despite the problems connected with his position, Mr. Glenn, when asked how it felt to be Grimsley's principal, smiled and said, "It's the best feeling in the world."

"... do have an open line of communication"

Mr. James B. Ballance

Mr. W. Spencer Gwynn

Mr. Gwynn, above, listens with consideration to the problems discussed in Student Affairs meetings. Mr. Ballance, below, is always interested in establishing a line of communication.

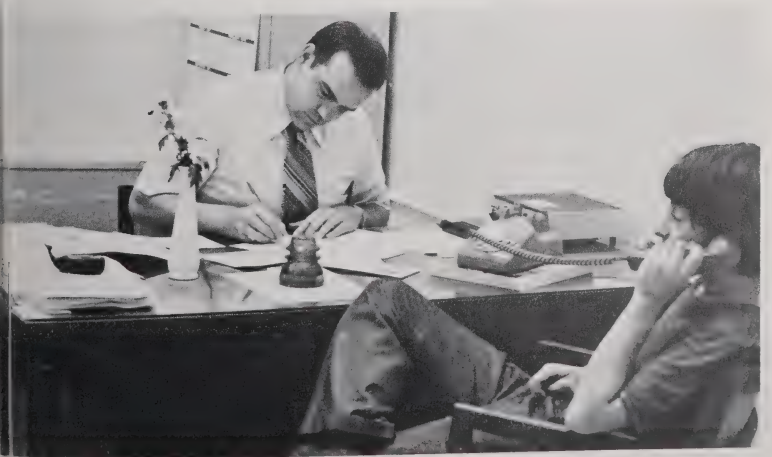
Contrary to previous years in which there was only one GHS vice-principal, Grimsley was very fortunate to be served by two this year. The new duo was comprised of two dedicated, energetic and enthusiastic gentlemen, Mr. James Ballance and Mr. William Gwynn.

Together with Mr. Glenn, they strove to make Grimsley the best senior high in the city. The three also did an excellent job in aiding the students to acclimate themselves to this school year.

Mr. Ballance and Mr. Gwynn both agreed that the reason why the year was peaceful and not turbulent was that students had no qualms about walking into either vice-principals' or Mr. Glenn's office and talking over their grievances. As Mr. Gwynn said, "Because we do have an open line of communication, students feel free to come in and discuss their problems and ... well, just rap, in a sense."

In addition to keeping "an open line of communication", both men were busy with the other duties. Mr. Gwynn, as assistant principal in charge of student affairs, advised the Student Affairs Committee, was in charge of the bus drivers and their vehicles, handled discipline problems and often read the afternoon announcements. Mr. Ballance, a former GHS English teacher and this year's principal in charge of instruction, was responsible for changes in the curriculum, read the announcements and handled the bookroom.

During both football and basketball seasons, both men supervised the sale of tickets at the games. Probably their most important contribution to student enjoyment came in their arrangements for buses and their good-natured chaperoning of these buses to away games. To round out their sports involvement for the year, Mr. Ballance and Mr. Gwynn took charge of the GHS intramural program.



Secretaries, Dean perform valuable services for GHS students

One place that a person might want to avoid between 8:20 and 8:40 a.m. is the dean's office. Here, the staff is busy attending to the needs of GHS students, whose line spills out the door into the main hall.

One person who withstands this hectic situation daily is Dean of Students, Mrs. Daphne Stanton. Mrs. Stanton spends much of her day supervising the dean's office. Attendance and information files of GHS's 1900-plus students are her special responsibilities.

Three other ladies who help GHS to function smoothly are secretaries Mrs. Coltrane, Mrs. Reece, and Mrs. Shaw. As well as being Mr. Glenn's private secretary, Mrs. Coltrane has such duties as counting and depositing the money from school project sales. Mrs. Reece's duties include making copies of records and grade transcripts. Guidance secretary Mrs. Shaw finds her days crowded with such jobs as making appointments for students and filling out a multitude of transcripts.

One of Mrs. Ellen Reece's recurring jobs, above, is organizing computer cards. Dean Stanton, below, instructs an assistant in her duties.

As secretary in the guidance center, Mrs. Anna Shaw has many files to keep and use. Mrs. Coltrane, below, provides a myriad of services as secretary to Mr. Glenn.

Faculty Club sponsors hamburger barbecue

Seven members of the GHS faculty, elected from each of the subject departments, made up this year's Faculty Advisory Committee. Formed two years ago as a result of teacher interest, this group's chief concern is to help emphasize the needs of the school and to back Mr. Glenn whenever he goes before the city school board with a request. Headed by Chairman Robert Fredrickson, the organization was instrumental in having the teachers' parking lot paved with gravel and in covering the cafeteria's worn-out floors with new tiles — something which the committee hopes to do also in the science building. In addition, during the Christmas holidays, the members suggested to a city school official from the central office that the science building be enlarged and its equipment up-dated.

The social arm of the Grimsley faculty is the Faculty Club, headed by Miss Lynda Tamblyn. This year, the club kicked off its activities with an autumn hamburger supper to welcome the new teachers (chief chefs at this informal gathering were Mr. Glenn, Mr. Gwynn and Mr. Ballance, who proved with their cooking skills that being school administrators is not the only thing they do well). During the semester break, the club provided coffee and doughnuts for teachers who were tiredly grading mid-term exams, and at the end of the year, it held a picnic lunch. Also, this group financed the Senior Tea and made the appropriate gestures to teachers in time of illness, deaths in the family, and weddings.

Counselors aid students in planning for their futures

Being the advisor of more than four hundred students apiece is the difficult job of guidance counselors Mrs. Moody, Mrs. Bowden, Miss Schiffley and Miss Harrell. Their appointment sheets perpetually filled with names of students, these ladies handle a variety of situations — from helping a student choose the right college to advising one on whether or not he should take a part-time schedule. The Counselors' ultimate goal is to aid each individual in getting the most value out of his high school education to prepare for his future endeavors.

The GHS Marine ROTC program also functions as a guidance service. This special training helps young men to become leaders and good citizens. Head of the GHS unit, Col. Booker, assists his boys in getting college scholarships, law enforcement jobs and in joining the armed forces.

Even stalwart Marines like M/Sgt. Zales and Col. Booker have to relax sometime.

Miss Mildred Herring

Miss Herring and Mrs. Robinson, above, must spend many hours hard at work to keep all of Grimsley's library systems working smoothly. Two students, right, use their study hall period gathering information for research papers.

Grimsley library makes knowledge accessible to the students

To maintain a well-ordered library, Miss Herring must correctly catalog new books.

Each fall, members of the sophomore English classes come to Grimsley's library to become acquainted with its facilities. They admire its spaciousness, its wall-to-wall carpeting, air-conditioning, attractive decor, cases of books, and the reading lounge, where a student can relax and enjoy a magazine or newspaper before school or during the day. Each year, also, after having to make several visits there at term paper or book report time, these same students feel that they might be a trifle too "acquainted" with the library.

No matter why a student goes to the library, the well-equipped building and efficient librarian staff, headed by Miss Herring, are ready to help him with his needs. This year, because the Greensboro City school system was found finally in compliance with HEW desegregation guidelines, federal aid was resumed, and the library was given $6,000 for new books. While there were eight total books per student, the library staff concedes more books are needed. PTSA and several clubs donated more than twelve hundred dollars, which helped pay for the new tape recorders, film projectors, cassettes and two record cabinets.

This year, as many students were transferred to different schools, the old English program was replaced by a city-wide plan to insure unity in the four senior highs' curriculum.

Under this new plan, English courses were divided into four categories: language, literature, composition into four categories: language, literature, composition and mass media. All of the courses, except Grimsley's Introductory Language Arts (the compulsory sophomore course), were one-semester electives and the only course offering honors credit was Advanced Placement English for chosen seniors.

Grimsley's English teachers had only a few weeks before the beginning of school to prepare for the new subjects. Co-chairmen of the GHS English department, Mrs. Hoffler and Miss Joyner, assigned students to class according to the students' abilities and needs. But in second semester, juniors and seniors registered for courses of their choice, and well-qualified sophomores were allowed to take an elective in lieu of the second half of ILA.

Whirlie III: You always bring up such dull topics. I didn't think it was bad and the new textbooks for Level I — Learning French and Spanish the Modern Way — were an improvement over the old books. Took Spanish and it was okay, so I might work up to L5.

Whirlie II: They finally got enough students to have a French Level 5 last year. The only thing I minded much in Level 1 was that we never went to the lab, 'cause the tapes that came with the books never arrived in time.

Whirlie III: Yeah. But we sure got to see enough films about the countries!

Whirlie I: Learning modern languages and cultures is good, but how about the past? I took Latin, too, and it's a big help in English vocabulary. We even had parties sometimes — like on Virgil's birthday.

Whirlie II: Sure, I know your Roman parties — Southern fried chicken. That's Roman?

New Black history course lends variety to history curriculum

Playing hooky on a beautiful spring day is a tempting thought for social sciences instructor Mr. Whisenant.

The school year: 1971-72. During this period, the following events occurred (more or less) in the Grimsley history department:

1. A new course, Non-Western Studies, was added to the history curriculum. This course mainly emphasized Black culture in America and Africa below the Sahara.
2. Due to the uncertainty of teacher assignments under the desegregation plan, the team-teaching world history course was discontinued.
3. The Advanced Placement Modern European History class learned the true meaning of "historical mindedness" — the hard way.
4. In many classes, the term papers and book reports were the rule, not the exception.
5. In October, class debates raged for several days on the admittance of Red China to the UN and the expulsion of Taiwan.
6. This year's American history students, like their predecessors, were treated to the three V's — Valley Forge, Vicksburg (battle of-), and Viet Nam — among other points of study.

This was the way it was in the history department, August '71 to May '72, and for the brief moment during which you glanced back into this year of historical pursuit you were there.

Relegated to the hall, a geometry student completes her make-up test in solitude.

In August 1971, Grimsley did not have enough math teachers and, therefore, classes were overcrowded. However, after more teachers arrived in late September, many students were moved to different classrooms and the exacting study of math continued uninterrupted.

Consumer math students received the fundamentals in math, while those in algebra I and II struggled with equations and parabolas. Geometry explorers discovered theorems governing lines and planes. Meanwhile, many seniors took not-so-easy college courses: advanced algebra, trigonometry, and elementary analysis, a one year course consisting of algebra, trigonometry and calculus.

To many, math is not an easy course. The following is a hint that a veteran mathematician might give a novice to help him endear himself to his teacher: feign interest in the day's lesson, don't play with the ant crawling on your desk, chew gum, or talk, or pen nasty words on the desk.

This year, as always, a large number of Grimsley students were enrolled in at least one science class. Classes were not too crowded, but there was a lack of equipment and the department hopefully expects an annex or remodeled second floor to be added to the science building in the future. There are also plans to revise the course of study to better meet the students' needs.

But as for this year, students trod a well-worn path. Biology was very much the same as in past years — dissected crayfish . . . tapeworms posthumously floating in alcohol-filled glass jars . . . the rather unappetizing appearance of wet, month-old bread, etc. Next was chemistry, the Rubicon more than one student has wished he had not crossed. One might assert that among the fond memories of this year's chemistry were . . . Bunsen burners that would never light . . . the melted sulfur that had to be scrubbed out of test tubes . . . memorizing that impossible table of elements . . . Moving into an even higher sphere, those who believe in living dangerously took physics, computer science, or advanced biology. Those who braved physics found a slide rule and a high I.Q. an advantage on the rough standardized tests, while those in computer science were challenged by having to write their programs for the computer to solve. In advanced biology, students further explored the living world, mainly in individualized projects.

Child Care Services is new Home Ec course

A big imagination is necessary when all sorts of games are played in Child Development.

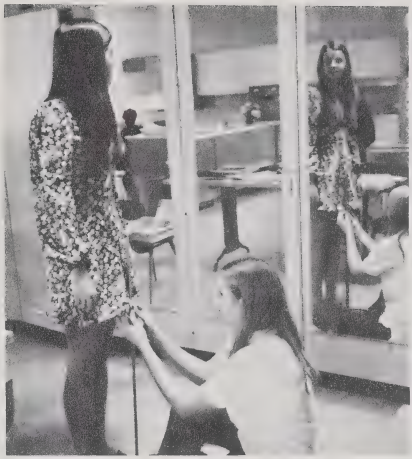
Learning how to read a menu correctly will enable this Family Life class to feel at ease in a restaurant.

At the sliding board, Child Development student cajoles her charge: "Johnny! Johnny! There are twelve children behind you, wanting to slide down, but you're holding them up. Come on, honey . . . Come on down, sweetie . . . Look, you little—!"

So go the little problems daily, as pupils in Home Economics classes learn rudiments important to happy, intelligent family living. Grimsley students are offered a variety of courses in this department — general Home Ec. courses, Clothing, Child Development, Advanced Foods and Family Life. New this year was Child Care Services, a two-hour course for juniors and seniors, who wish to seek employment after graduation, in nurseries, daycare centers or kindergartens. In this occupational class, girls often heard guest speakers from institutions such as local hospitals and UNC-G lecture on matters pertaining to pre-school children.

For 1972-73, the Home Economics department plans to have a boys' Home Ec. class and Child Development course for boys to learn their roles as fathers, how to select clothing and money management.

An assortment of culinary delights is featured at a Child Development baby shower, given for a needy mother.



Long enough to cover the subject, but short enough to be interesting is an appropriate cliche for this situation.

Three Grimsley artists win Gold Key Scholastic Art Awards

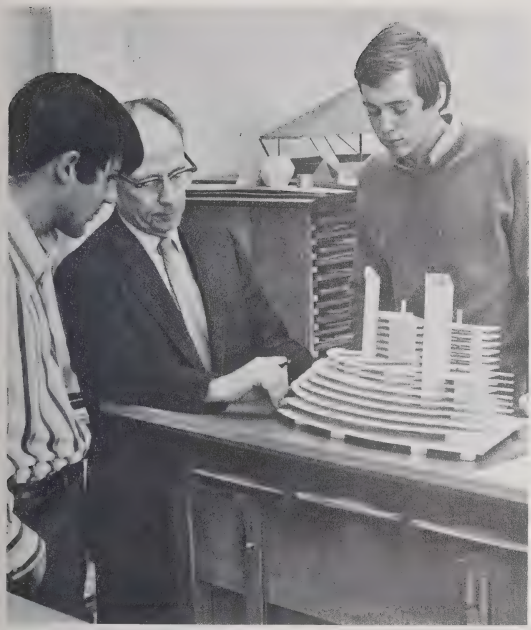
Gayle Swann receives (below) helpful comments about her drawing from art teacher Mrs. Stuart.

The art room is relatively quiet, save for occasional murmurs between the teacher and student and slight noises as young artists works.

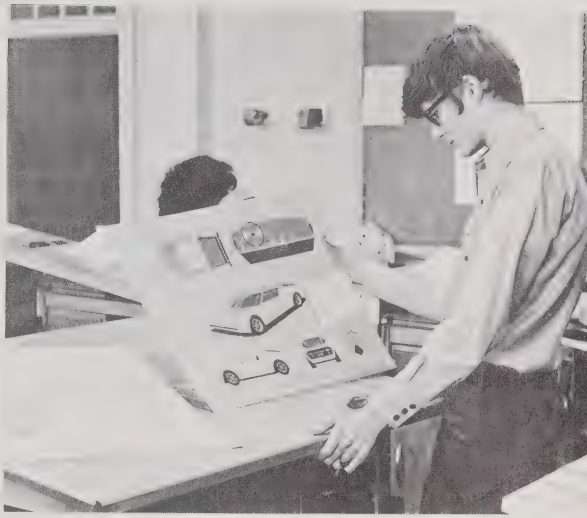
In one corner, a girl with an etching needle creates a flower on a thickness of plastic. Nearby, another student adds a stroke of grey to his painting. Further back, a sculptor painstakingly develops a horse from clay.

This view of GHS's potential vanDycks, Michaelangelos, daVincis and Picassos may be seen anyday in Mrs. Stuart's Level-3 and 4 art classes. In these advanced levels, pupils are allowed to express their imagination, creativity, and individuality in individual projects. Novice artists in beginning classes have less freedom and are confined to class projects assigned by the teachers.

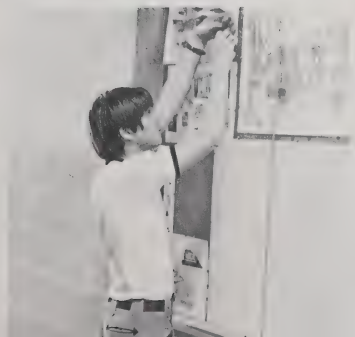
Aspiring artists from all classes labored hard on the masterpiece that they wanted to enter in the 1972 Scholastic Arts award contest test. Dreaming of winning a Gold Key Award, students submitted their art in January. This year, competition rose higher because the number of entries from each school was more restricted. Gold key winners were Carolyn Andrews, Barry Root, and Gayle Swann, while Celia Flock received a Certificate of Merit.



Drafting instructor Mr. Darnell explains a model constructed in the School of Design, NCSU. Below, Jimmy Troxler studies an original design for a sports car drawn last year by Joe Kent.



Perfection and accuracy are attained in GHS drafting classes



Seated at his drafting table, the student took out his T-square and triangle and attached a piece of paper to his board. He hesitated a moment, then began to draw, striving for complete accuracy. Anything — a bank building, an automobile part, a sailboat — could take form under his pencil; but he had a particular thing he wanted to design that day.

The architectural drawing is obviously confined to the field of architecture, but those students in technical drawing are enrolled in a basic course that is an introduction to many fields of drafting. These are structural, mechanical, and electrical drawing. Students in each type of class have often pursued their study of this field in college or technical school, or have become draftsmen following their high school graduation.

In May 1971 GHS student Phil Szostak won an award for outstanding design in North Carolina Industrial Arts Project Exhibition. This winning entry, in competition with 500 others, was a design for a swimming pool to be built next to the Grimsley gym. The design proved to be an excellent working model from which a pool can be built if funds become available. This year's entries to the 1972 contest include an original plan for a hospital complex.

Grimsley's bands and orchestras continue to make beautiful

From stately Bach and emotional Beethoven to the youthful, vigorous rhythm of "Jesus Christ Superstar", Grimsley's musical groups perform selections covering a broad cross-section of music categories. Grimsley is fortunate to have so many musical groups, which allow individuals to expand in the field of their specific talents — orchestra, band, chorus, choir and madrigals. An all-girls madrigal group was formed this year, comprised of girls with excellent singing voices. During the year, the music building seemed to be figuratively swinging with song. The dull thud of a drum, the mellowness of a tenor's voice, crashing keys of a piano and the blare of a trumpet, intermingled and produced a strangely harmonious sound. This sound grew in intensity when a group, with a public concert or state contest scheduled on the calendar, tried hard for perfection.

Grimsley's musical talents perform at numerous places — from football games to receptions to graduation ceremonies. This year, however, for the entire first semester, the musical associations could not play for the student body's school assemblies, because the auditorium was under repair.

After a long year of practice, many of the students are going on a ten-day tour of London this summer, sponsored by the Music Department.

Increased stamina and skill are results of physical education

Discovery of an apple, delivered to his "mail-box" by a service club, starts Coach Morton's day the right way.

Monday morning usually finds every physical education student coming to school with a grocery sack in hand. The afore mentioned sacks contain a rolled-up bundle consisting of one washed and ironed gym suit (that is, if mother relented and consented to do it), tennis shoes and a pair of crew socks, generally equipped with a hole or two. Thus, with his phys. ed. wardrobe in readiness, a student is ready for the weeks gym activities.

The phys. ed. teachers strive to make the sports both fun and physically beneficial. Whether it be volleyball, football, track or archery, every sport taught has a double purpose behind it:

1. to help develop strong, well-coordinated bodies and 2. to be a good sportsman. Also physical education helps develop skills in sports for future pleasure.

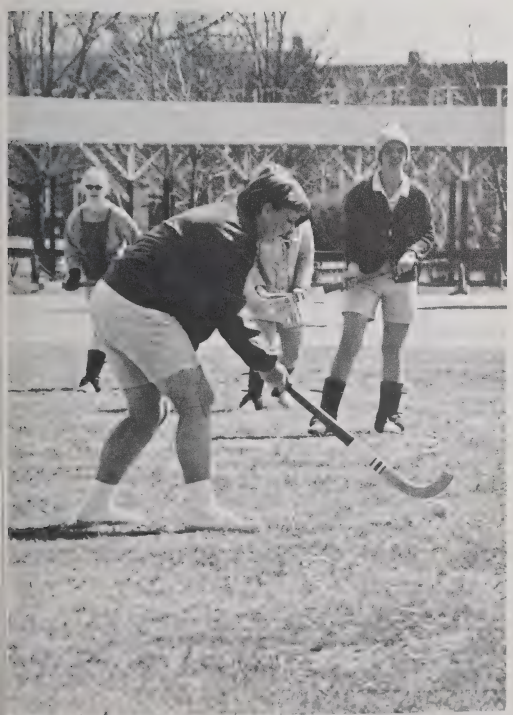
Driver Training instructors willing to risk their lives daily



To whom it may concern:
This is a citation of bravery and service above and beyond the call of duty, as earned by the coaches who teach the GHS populace how to drive. Outstanding incidents which best show these men's heroics include the following:
1. enduring such diverse drivers as Racy Rhoda Overconfident Oglebert, Nervous Nellie, and Dud Douglas.
2. not going into shell shock when a student driver seems to be doing everything in his power to run the car into a ditch.
3. remaining unruffled when a student tries to make a left turn at 25 mph.
4. retaining sanity after a novice almost sideswipes a whole row of shiny cars.
5. speaking civilly to a driver after slamming on the brakes and exclaiming: "Didn't you see that KID?", to get an answer like "What kid?"
6. having the undeniable courage to take an inexperienced driver on a superhighway.
7. being able to smile grimly even after a student freezes in an intersection.
GHS drivers' training teachers, we salute you! Long may you live (we hope)!

Occupational courses offer chance for head start on careers

In a downtown business firm, a girl finishes typing a letter . . . A young man, behind a counter of a large department store, helps a potential customer . . . a nurse's aide, in a busy hospital, wheels a patient to X-ray.

These seemingly dissimilar incidents above in fact have a similarity: all involve Grimsley students who are taking advantage of on-the-job training. They are enrolled in COO, CDE, and ICT.

COO (Cooperative Office Occupation) is a program for those who wish to become secretaries, clerical workers or receptionists. CDE (Cooperative Distributive Education) is designed for the students who seek employment in the selling and marketing areas of business. Finally, ICT (Industrial Cooperative Training) meets the needs for those who want to become, for example, a radio and TV repairman, a dentist's assistant or a nurse's aide.

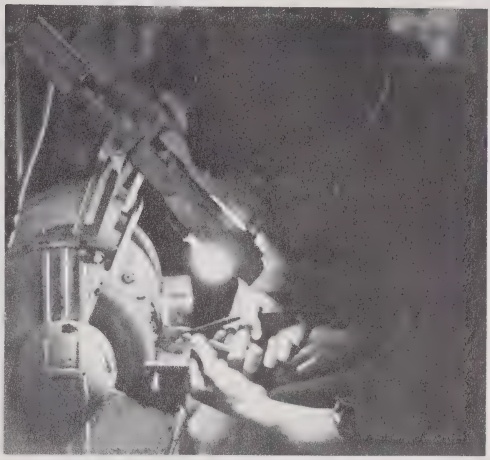
Mrs. Hornaday supervises her students in practicing skills which will prepare them for secretarial work.

Many students find new interests and abilities in shop projects

One of Grimsley's busiest places is the first floor of the vocational building, which houses the machine, electronics and woodworking shops. In Mr. Sutton's machine shop, pupils learn to manufacture metal machine parts. Because there are more boys in these classes than anywhere in the state, the percentage of GHS boys that are placed in jobs after graduation is the highest in the Southeast.

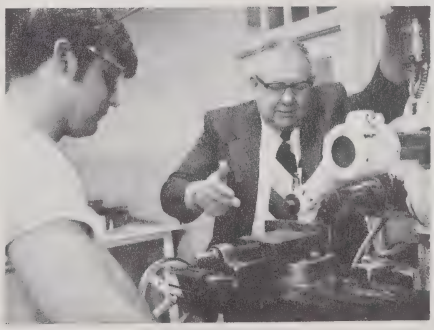
After completing the two-year agenda in electronics, students have a technical background which is useful in many areas of engineering. Mr. Mays' classes work on projects such as construction of stereo amplifiers and shortwave transmitters. Last spring, Bob Morris brought distinction to his class by winning First Place Electronics award in a state-wide contest.

Mr. Dorsett's wood shop students delve into the study of wood and wood construction. To utilize their knowledge of design, and technique, the boys built cabinets, tables and doors.



Success in grinding a tool in machine shop requires total care and precision.

Project construction, integral part of advanced electronics, consumes one-third of a student's time in the course.



Mr. Sutton gives a third-year machine shop student instructions in using a milling machine to make a drill press clamp.

NICHES FOUND

"Some found their niches easily . . ."

Organization—a group of people—
Where it is "We" instead of "I"—
A common goal—or is it?
Clubs are strange combinations of paradoxes:
Warm interest, stagnating apathy:
Selfishness, unselfishness.
For reasons indigenous to most of mankind,
Everyone has a longing to belong,
To be a part of something important.
This longing is realized in various degrees:
Popular Paul, Mundane McGee, and
Out-of-it Oliver.
Popular Paul has an intangible, undefinable
Quality that makes people like him, and
Consequently he is in many activities.
Mundane McGee is the average person with
A few close friends, and is involved in
A smaller number of clubs.
These two personalities contribute a
Stabilizing factor to an ever-changing school.
Their work helps both themselves and others.
But Out-of-it Oliver is the type who cannot
Or will not participate in anything. His
Motto: "If you want it done, you do it."
Organizations are not the reason why schools
Are built; yet they are an integral part of Education that continues the job of educating.

Torchlight holds fall induction ceremony and social in library

Clad in caps and gowns, above, Torchlight members enter for the induction ceremony. Below, Advisor Miss Moore explains the committees of the club.

"I pledge myself to uphold the high purpose of the National Honor Society to which I have been elected . . ."

With the uttering of this pledge, a student is officially inducted into Torchlight, Grimsley's chapter of the National Honor Society. Induction into this society is coveted by many, but the requirements are high. To be considered for election, a student must achieve at least a 3.4 average each semester, beginning with his sophomore year. A list of qualified students is given to the faculty, who elect the new members, keeping in mind that a Torchlight inductee should be outstanding in scholarship, service, character, leadership, and knowledge.

This December, the traditional Torchlight ceremony, which consisted of the old members with shining lights solemnly traversing the dark auditorium in search of the new honored students, could not be held, as the auditorium was under repair. Instead, twenty-one seniors, chosen from an unusually high number of qualified students, were issued invitations in homeroom. The induction was held in the library at night and was followed by a tea. The following day, attractive yellow carnations, pinned to shirts and blouses, distinguished the new members from the rest of the student body.

In March, members held a second induction for seniors and juniors. In early spring, members produced their annual talent show, with proceeds going to the Torchlight scholarship given to a worthy senior.

FTA members gain a taste of teaching by helping at Brooks

To begin their year of education-orientated projects, the Future Teachers of America Club gave an informal tea in September for their new members. Lingering at the punch bowl and cookie plates, the group discussed possible activities to widen their knowledge of the teaching profession.

During the school year members volunteered to go to Brooks Elementary School during their study periods. Here they read stories to children, played games, assisted students with homework, or simply minded a class to give a weary teacher a few minutes' respite. At Grimsley they aided instructors by running errands, filing papers, and doing other miscellaneous tasks. Also on their FTA agenda for the year were three conventions: one for officers at Pfeiffer College in November, a regional meeting at Northeastern Guilford in February, and a state convention at Raleigh in March.

From October 24 to 30, the club was engaged in American Education Week activities: every day a member gave over the PA system a talk on a topic related to education. Also, the club was in charge of a luncheon for local civic leaders and representative teachers, held in the GHS cafeteria.

One of the closing notes of the FTA year was a banquet in May, at which next year's officers were elected and installed. Dr. Lois Edinger of UNC-G spoke on the rewards and problems of teaching. As their final service these future teachers assisted senior homeroom teachers on graduation night.

FHA girls invade local shopping center with baked goodies

Under advisor Miss Phillips, the twenty-two members of the GHS chapter of Future Homemakers of America explored the possibilities of home economics as a career and prepared themselves for housewife roles in the not-too-distant future. Each month the club met at a member's home for a business meeting; and at covered dish suppers in the home ec building, the girls allowed each other to sample favorite or new recipes.

On two Saturdays this year, FHA girls manned an outdoor table at a local shopping center and peddled cookies, cakes and brownies as their chief money-making project. In December they bolstered their Christmas cheer with a party. Several months later, the members, arrayed in outfits they made themselves, observed the tradition of the annual Mother-Daughter banquet. In April attention was focused on the state FHA convention in Raleigh. At the conclusion of the year's activities, the senior members and the mothers of all FHA girls were honored at a tea.

The ninety-nine boys in this year's Marine ROTC program learned the usual basics of "marines". This year, however, the military aspect of the course was de-emphasized; such activities as marching were used mainly as teaching devices to develop discipline and the ability to make quick decisions. The motivating force behind the program was to produce good leaders, not fighting men.

A special event on the ROTC agenda was the early November inspection. Four senior officials from the office of the Inspector-General, Washington, D.C. came to GHS, and the apprehensive cadets were seen about campus with carefully positioned caps and well-polished shoes. Col. Booker, commander of the GHS unit, and his able assistant, M/Sgt. Zales, reported that "out of the eight MROTC programs (in Southern high schools) we were rated the best."

The ROTC held the annual Marine Corps Birthday Ball in the spring. Then, in the first week of May, all the cadets went to a Virginia Marine base to observe various leatherneck activities, ride in a helicopter, and practice on the firing range. Junior and senior cadets earned advanced first-aid certificates. The drill team, a voluntary group, performed at Cougar basketball games and several Veteran's Day parades.

A stern gaze and a tense moment during inspection are usually followed by a word of praise from Col. Pearcy, the senior military inspector of the U. S. Marine Corps.

On the football field at half-time, the marching band, under direction of Mr. Harris, assembles for its first selection.

The pulsating sounds from the electric piano, electric guitars, basses, drum set, trumpets and saxes were very much in evidence as the Stage Band, under the direction of Mr. Murph and Mr. Sampson, swung into such numbers as "Screaming Brass" and "Home Brew", their favorite, during class at seventh period. Members participated in the October massed-band concert in the boys' gym, the highlight of which was Mr. Hazelman's arrangement of "Jesus Christ Superstar". In the fall, they attended the Bandmaster's Concert in Charlotte and staged a concert at the UNC-G music building for the university music students. February was All-State Stage Band time, and fifty-two GHS musicians won chairs in that group.

The Marching Band, smaller this year than last, shaped itself into a quick-stepping, harmonious group. Band director Mr. Harris, new to GHS, spent many hours teaching the band contemporary songs and marching procedures. At every home football game, the band entertained during halftime, utilizing the skills they had learned. In November, the group marched in a parade at the War Memorial Auditorium.

Performing at a concert for UNC-G music students, the stage band begins the song, "Up, Up and Away".

Concert Band members sell combs for summer London Trip

Mr. Rooker sits pensively at his desk while reviewing music for the Concert Band's recording session.

At several concerts this year, the Concert Band demonstrated the skill and fineness its members had acquired in their music. The band's first date of the concert season was an informal October performance at which the GHS bands and choir, together with musical groups from certain junior highs, enjoyed a music festival of their own making. In January, the group played at the New Music Clinic in Aycock Auditorium at UNC-G, and some members practiced ardently for All-State Band auditions. After much refining of their rendition of several music compositions, the band gave its third public performance in February. Selections at this concert included "Golden Jubilee", "Take Five", and some John Philip Sousa marches.

Eagerly anticipating an exciting tour of London this summer, some Concert Band members used their salesmanship prowess in selling combs to help pay their way; the highest number sold was one hundred and two boxes.

Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" features Bray and Kritzer

During class period, Symphony members practice diligently to perfect notes and to develop blending tones.

Strains of such melodies as "Stars and Stripes Forever" and "Incredible Flutist" often floated out from room 700, where the Symphony Band practiced under director Mr. Hazelman. Members strove to produce the best music possible, and once a week each particular section sighed over difficult steps (drills on technique) which had to be mastered.

Early fall brought the group's first concert, an informal one in the boys' gym. In January, they attended a New Music Clinic at UNC-G, at which school band directors throughout the state convened. A late winter concert was held, featuring such outstanding performers as pianist Janice Bray and clarinetist Tom Kritzer, and such compositions as "Rhapsody in Blue" and several Sousa marches. A spring concert was slated for March 23 and drew a large audience.

Sparkling and popular offshoot of this band—the Stage Band, under Mr. Sampson and Mr. Murph—shared the spotlight at the GO Banquet with famous entertainers Glenn Campbell, Buddy Hackett, Boots Randolph and others.

The stage lights glare. The blend of low, sometimes pleasant, sometimes discordant, sounds of instruments being tuned can be heard outside the curtains. Music sheets rustle subtly as some orchestra members hastily leaf through them to study a selection that is particularly difficult. Jokes are exchanged, skirts straightened, chairs adjusted. It's quiet now — it's time to begin.

The little tableau of concert time is familiar to GHS orchestra members. This familiarity arises from the many times this year's orchestra participated in concerts and contests, usually with concert mistress, Suzanne Bilyeu, presiding. Selections ranged from classical to contempory compositions.

In November, the orchestra's first concert was held in Friendly auditorium and was open to the public; two other public performances were given later in the year. February found many members feverishly practicing for coveted chairs in the All-State Orchestra. Then, in the spring, along with warm days and flowering dogwoods, came the State Festival at Catawba College and also Concerto Night, in which senior members performed solos. For some orchestra members, the apex of the year was a ten-day London trip in June arranged by the Music Department; many sold combs to help finance their tour.

An appendage of the orchestra was the Singing Strings, composed of eight members, each of whom was a first-chair musician. This group often performed for private groups at receptions and other social functions.

Trash cans, Christmas cards sold by choruses to raise funds

With Mr. Ronald Hill's direction and coaching, the Beginners' Mixed Chorus, containing a number of students with only a limited singing background, became more proficient in the musical arts. The group received much training in how to sing the scales, breathe properly, understand rhythm, and sight-read music. Mr. Hill, commenting on their progress, stated, "This group really did well."

In Miss Mooring's small Advanced Girls' Chorus, students built upon their first year's choral experience and began to read music with more ease. This spring the group dedicated much of their practice time to prepare for a state-wide contest.

Both the Beginners' Mixed Chorus and the Advanced Girls' Chorus participated in a casual October concert in the boys' gym. Together with the other GHS choral groups, these two bodies appeared in the Christmas concert held in the Page Auditorium. Also in December, to raise funds for the future London trip, the Mixed Chorus sold trash baskets; the Advanced Girls' group, Christmas cards.

In a downtown bank, lunchtime customers hear Christmas music sung on the bank mezzanine by the GHS Choir.

With much practice and clear, rich voices, the "elite" of the Grimsley choral groups — the Madrigals and Choir — maintained the record of excellence achieved by past members. In numerous concerts throughout the year, these two groups generously shared the polished results of their efforts with the public.

In the fall, the Page and Grimsley choirs presented "Ode to the Virginia Voyage", a collection of songs celebrating a journey to the New World. At Christmas the group sang for a ladies' auxiliary at the First Presbyterian Church, treated those at the First National Bank to carols, and appeared with all the GHS choral groups at a concert. In March, they competed in a city-wide singing contest.

Appearing in medieval costume, the Madrigals were booked at such places as the Carriage House for a luncheon and at a book club meeting. At Yuletide, they sang at the Kiwanis party at the YMCA and in January, thirteen of the eighteen singers attended the two-day Mars Hill Choral Clinic. A new Madrigals was formed this year — the Girls' Madrigals — who mingled with musical groups from other schools at a UNC-G workshop.

1972 WHIRLIGIG captures the spirit of GHS mosaic

1972 WHIRLIGIG STAFF, dressed in styles of 1950, recreates the appearance of the first WHIRLIGIG staff. First row: Doss, Dawson, Drinkard, Gutterman, vanZee, Stout, Bryan, Kelly, Tesh, McFalls, Hankins. Second row: Read, Helms, Mahaffee, Daniel, Hutchinson, Reynolds, Ferrell, Pharr, Kornegay. Third row: Kinney, Irvin, Wheeler, Leonard, Advisor Miss Powell, Herman, Ward.

In early 1971, even before buds appeared on trees and the very last of the '71 yearbook found itself at the printer's in Charlotte, the new WHIRLIGIG staff convened to plan this book. In a thesaurus opened at a random page, an inspired finger struck "mosaic." And so began the genesis of this yearbook.

By May 1971 Victoria Herman, literary editor, had written the poetry for the title and division pages, some pictures had been taken, and the pages had been planned. After a too-short summer the group reassembled in August with some welcomed and needed additions. The long, hard evolution from ideas to 248 pages of reality was on.

In addition to completing the opening section, co-editors Eileen McFalls and Martha Tesh, chief snappers of the whip, made sure that everyone made his deadline. They and the managing editor Johanna van Zee spent many hours outside of school drawing layouts, cropping pictures and typing to help section editors. Feature editor Susan Kelly slaved over her division pages to make them perfect, while Victoria found that there were not a superfluous number of volunteers to write copy; so she proceeded to write — and write — and write.

Closeted in the dark room Matt Irvin and Tim Doss were kept extremely busy developing pictures they had taken. Faced with voluminous tasks, senior editors Cindy Drinkard and Jeanne Bryan, organizations editor Beverly Leonard, academics editor Anne Ferrell, Photography editor Debbie Dawson, faculty editor Susan Pharr, sports editors Craig Kinney and Tom Hankins, and the rest of the staff struggled to complete their work on time.

Drained, the staff said their adieus to the last of this book in March and in May toasted their rewarded efforts with a party.

A rather motley group met last August to gather together the rudiments of what would become the '71-72 HIGH LIFE. Optimism ruled this staff, who remained undaunted as they faced and solved almost insurmountable problems. They revitalized the paper with student involvement. With guest editorials, features, contests, and personal interviews, successive issues of HIGH LIFE attracted a growing interest and support from students.

Winthrop Watson and John Parrett, loyal leftovers from last year's staff, inherited without quibble the agonies of co-editorship. Rorin Platt assumed news page decisions. Features fell on Parke Puterbaugh and Brian Shaw, while Butch Allgood and Herb Underwood shared playmaker positions on the sports page.

Always trying to make a buck, the HIGH LIFE staff squirmed through two trying subscription sales and sallied forth constantly to contact merchants for ads. Without Carolyn Tyer, business manager, ad editor Libby DeBerry, and subscription chairman Ellen Bosher, those few pennies would never have stretched far enough for the expensive issues that appeared.

The newly-formed second semester journalism class gullibly took much of the pressure of writing off the staff, while they gawked with pride to see their first words in print. Gaining experience, this group became the making of a good next-year's staff.

Though the HIGH LIFE staff got off to a slow start, because of inexperience and a new advisor, Mrs. Rachel Morton, these quavering quillers constantly picked up speed and know-how to whip the bi-weekly publication into something all GHS'ers are very proud of.

May Appreciation Day is VICA's "thank you" to employers

The participants in the Grimsley Industrial Cooperative Training program were automatically members of the ICT-VICA group, a service and social club. Employed at places including veterinarian offices, nursing homes, dental offices and construction firms, the club sought to gain leadership qualities and a broader understanding of the business world.

Twice a month the club held meetings at the International House of Pancakes, at school over morning coffee and doughnuts, or at a dinner gathering. The big annual service project was the collection of canned food for a needy family at Christmas. Then, in January, handmade scented candles and chocolate bars were sold to raise more money for service projects. February brought the district ICT contest, to which the Grimsley unit produced two contestants in the job interview and speech categories; these contestants were in competition with ICT members from five counties. The school year drawing to a close, the members sponsored an Apprentice Day in May, during which they awarded their employers certificates of merit.

The Machine Shop VICA and its advisor, Mr. Sutton, usually met on one Wednesday night per month to socialize and to relate how each member was faring in his machine shop job. For their main project, the boys collected broken or well-worn toys, repaired them and distributed them among underprivileged children.

At the end of May, the club members feasted on juicy steaks at their annual steak dinner. After their hard work in school and on the job, the boys took a vacation from the noise of machinery and went as a group to the beach this summer.

At breatfast or dinner gatherings at various local restaurants, or nocturnal business meetings at school, the Grimsley DECA (Distributive Educational Clubs of America) group planned their activities. The club members, all of whom worked in buying or selling positions at such places as Belk, Gate City Pharmacy, and Southern Photo Supplies, learned more about their DE careers in club projects.

In November, Al Gibson won first place award in the job interview contest at the district DECA contest in Burlington. The next big event was a February bake sale at Quaker Village Shopping Center, in which the money was used for the club's spring community project. In Raleigh, GHS delegates attended the state DECA convention held in March. At the end of the school year, instead of the traditional banquet for employers, the members presented certificates of appreciation to their bosses.

"The girls really tried hard this year," proudly commented Cooperative Office Occupations advisor Mrs. Hornaday. "Their employers and I are quite pleased with their success." The fifteen girls, who worked as typists, general office workers, and secretaries at such firms as Blue Bell and Western Electric, L. Richardson Hospital, and Lindley Junior High, credited some of their success to their social-and-service club, COO. Through club programs they learned much about the number and variety of office careers.

Once a month at a dinner meeting in a member's home or at an early morning gathering at a pancake house, the group took care of club business. In December they held a candy sale, of which the proceeds were channeled into their main project — providing toys and clothes for two needy families. Part of the money was also used to finance a dinner at the end of the school year for the girls' employers.

"Keep 'em movin'" was the motto for this year's bus drivers

The subject of busing intensified as a highly debated issue throughout the nation this year. Advocates of busing predicted a Phoenix of love and understanding to rise from the ashes of years of misunderstandings and social and economics barriers by the mere mixing of races; opponents cried that their rights as free Americans were violated by forced busing.

But politics notwithstanding, Grimsley's fifty-four buses had to transport two to three thousand students and the bus drivers' motto seemed to be "Keep 'em Movin'."

And move they did. Before and after school, Greensboro appeared to be invaded by giant, lumbering orange bugs that were seen on nearly every other street. There were several minor difficulties at the beginning — a wheel lost here, a group of children who never got picked up there, the buses pulling in at ten thirty — but soon the bus drivers got the situation under control.

We are in debt for the bus drivers' brave performances under extreme and trying circumstances. It is not easy to operate in heavy traffic with half of Miss X's first grade reenacting World War II in the back of the bus.

School Store Assistants — Knight, Ashley, and Debs — pose with school store manager, Mr. Whittemore.

To lighten the weight of innumerable tasks is the dedicated purpose of various groups of student assistants. For the Dean's office aides, a typical period is a potpourri of sick slips, ringing phones, and messages to be delivered to every corner of the campus. Main office assistants attend to miscellaneous paper work and greet guests; while their neighbors down the hall in the guidance center make appointments, run errands, and attend to clerical jobs.

Other groups rendering invaluable aid are bookroom assistants, school store salesmen, stage crew, and paperback library aides. Whether counting out or carrying heavy, dusty textbooks, selling pencils, paper and notebooks, attending to stage equipment, or keeping up with the paperback library, all of these groups are indispensable facets of GHS.

Library Council district convention elects Celia Weisner president

In addition to keeping shelves in order, manning the time clock, and assisting at the main desk, library assistants spent several weeks on a major project — revising the magazine files to provide easier removal and better care of the magazines.

Being a library assistant was not all hard work; the group held informal meetings. They welcomed Christmas with a covered dish supper in the library.

Besides the special meetings, the staff also assembled every Wednesday morning to keep informed of changes within the library and to volunteer suggestions on library maintenance. At the district convention held in November at Smith Senior High, Grimsley sent several delegates, one of whom, Celia Weisner, won the election for president.

During second semester there was a dearth of assistants. Head librarian Miss Herring conceded that the remaining thirty "were not nearly enough for a job as big as this," but added, "The staff was good this year; their attitudes were excellent — I couldn't ask for more."

"Improvisation most important," says advisor Miss Causey

Playmasters assemble a bulletin board consisting of pictures of their performances.

Those Whirlies with a secret inkling to become part of "show biz" or just an interest in the stage as a pastime could refine their acting talents in the Playmasters club. Consisting mostly of members from advisor Miss Causey's dramatics class, the group met every other week to learn about the world of the theatre—costuming, make-up, acting, and especially the skill of improvising in producing a play. Enjoying this creative facet of theatricals, they practiced ad-libbing, raiding the storage room for spur-of-the-minute costumes, and improvising scenery to create an illusion. Then they gave four one-act plays for the drama class.

In the spring, the GHS actors performed three one-act plays at a district meeting in Roxboro. Those groups receiving excellent ratings at this convention met in April at the state contest in Chapel Hill. Another important event for three members of Playmasters (Robin Starlitz, Susan Pearce, and Denise Descouzis) was auditioning for this summer's Governor's School.

Student Council undergoes important structure changes

The 1971-72 Student Council was unique in two ways: (1) it did not begin to operate until November, and (2) it underwent important structure changes. Because many Grimsley students were transferred to other schools under the current desegregation plan, the spring '71 council elections were ruled invalid and new ones, directed by Student Affairs, were held in October.

In reconstructing the Council, Student Affairs was bent upon creating a group that would represent equally all segments of the school. Important changes included substituting a Student Monitor for Council president, elimination of the Traffic Squad and the office of Council vice president, and requiring two co-chairman (one black, one white) to head both Pep Board and YRC.

Despite its late start, the council supervised the annual Thanksgiving project of providing turkey dinners for the GHS custodians and cafeteria employees. The group was also in charge of changes in the paperback library, drafting a new constitution, May Day, spring elections, and a student committee. To gain ideas for council improvement, members attended district and state workshops.

First organized last summer by Cy Johnson and Vice Principal Mr. Gwynn, the GHS Student Affairs Committee was the germination of the idea to alleviate possible tensions resulting from the new desegregation plan. Containing representatives of all factions of the school, the committee temporarily took the place of the Student Council and discussed important issues that had to be resolved.

Two major matters that concerned the group in the fall were student elections and Homecoming. New nominating procedures for the Homecoming court and different requirements for elections were agreed upon after much debate. Working many hours, the elections committee video-taped campaign speeches which were shown in English classes, since the auditorium could not be used. After both elections and Homecoming proved successful, the group taped acceptance speeches and oaths of office.

In November, the gaps left in the committee by some old members who were elected to Student Council were filled by new people. Thus full-bodied Student Affairs let Student Council assume policy making decisions and concentrated on working with faculty and students. Two of their undertakings included examining service club charters for clauses violating the school constitution, and joining with Page to end GHS-Page rivalry.

GYC's voter registration drive aims for eighteen-year- olds

The 1971-72 GYC continued a number of traditional activities. Last summer, area young people again enjoyed the Coliseum parking lot dances, directed by the GHS district chairman, John Cocklereece. Fall witnessed the reincarnation of past GYC television programs in Mainpoint '71-'72. Another venture into broadcasting was the radio program of popular music, Gap, on WCOG. Then, as Christmas approached, the council entered a float in the Holiday Jubilee Parade, sponsored the Miss Christmas Seal contest, and coordinated a Christmas gift wrapping operation with Thalhimers.

To provide good music for the young, a fall concert with Goose Creek Symphony and a winter concert with the Grass Roots were held in Aycock Auditorium. In December, the council helped to stage the play Once Upon A Mattress and in January it was one of the sponsors of a journalism workshop at UNC-G. For fourteen weeks, the council supervised the televised Hi IQ Bowl matches, sponsored by United Dairies. Then in March, there were two big projects — the yearly talent show and an extensive Voter Registration, in which a $100 prize was offered to the school with the highest percentage of registered eighteen year olds.

Directed by co-chairmen Susan Lindsay and Carolyn Womack, the Youth Recreation Council held three successful dances — Homecoming, Twirp, and the Senior Prom. However, due to student disinterest, monthly dances, sponsored by YRC in the past, were discontinued and the Holiday Dance at Christmas was cancelled.

Undoubtedly, YRC members devoted their time and creative talents to the main projects of the year. For the November Homecoming Dance, they recruited Rainbow Bridge to provide the music, tastefully decorated the girls' gym, and painted the arch which was used for the Homecoming court presentation. At Christmas, they brightened the season for the elderly people at the Masonic Home by singing carols. Valentine's Day heralded the traditional Twirp Dance, which was a "come as you are" this year.

In May the junior YRC members were chief decorators for the Senior Prom. At presstime, efforts were being made to hold the Prom at a place more sophisticated than the boys' gym.

Interclub Council puts it all together

Interclub Council is the consolidated organization of all the clubs. It was formed as a liaison between the clubs to help them work together and coordinate club activities. Each member is a club president. This year has been a particularly challenging year as clubs remolded themselves and faced new and very personal tests of character. Difficulties melted into enthusiasm, however, as they met new people, and new members were introduced during second semester.

Interclub did especially well in raising a total of $400 for Jody Thompson, a small boy desperately in need of heart surgery.

Leo Club members hasten to assure curious questioners that their creed is "leadership, experience, and opportunity," and they say that this year they have really lived it for Grimsley High School.

Most of their attention as club members has been directed at projects connected with helping the blind. Thus they attempt to live up to the major project of their parent and sponsoring club, the Lions Club. The boys aided their parent club by participating in the White Cane Drive and a house-to-house broom sale.

Led by their advisor, Ron Huber, and President Rick Lee, they had an enjoyable Christmas party for blind people of Greensboro. At the Teen-Age Carnival they set up a booth for coin tossing and drew many interested participants.

The Leo members say that this year they intend to go all out in their plan to correct the problem of our mud and pools around GHS on rainy days.

In lieu of projects, Leo members perfect their clowning skill, here demonstrated for the photographer.

Paula needed a kidney machine in her home. Tag Days and trick-or-treating for UNICEF express their world-wide concern for all people. Annually, a Mother-Daughter Banquet is planned and prepared by the Seniorettes. Charlie Brown posed as a football player as they made "Happiness is Love, Peace, and a Touchdown" their theme for their homecoming project. All the members benefited from the sound advice and hard work of President Ann Ralls, Mrs. Annie Hines, and Mrs. Joyce Norris, Seniorette advisors.

Civitans claim to have the best looking sister club at Grimsley

"Blue Power" reigned, at least over Page! The Civitans' contribution to the outstanding spirit here at GHS was a new victory flag. More than one kind of spirit was expressed when the Civitans join the Civinettes (the Civitans claim to have the best-looking sister club at Grimsley) and attend a different church service each month. New members are warmly received as they played the "dunkies" in the Teenage Carnival at the Civitan-Civinette Dunking Booth.

One of the special activities for the Civitans was the youth conference in Hendersonville. The Civitan District Convention in Durham was another highlight of the year. Greatly appreciated ideas and advice were given by President Don West and Advisor B. J. Caines.

In spite of the frigid weather, Civitan members were delighted to pose for a Whirligig informal.

When the new Victory Flag flies over the GHS campus, along with the winning team and their appreciative classmates, members of Civinettes and Civitans can feel an extra glow of pride. For the flag was made by them as a gift to Grimsley.

The Thanksgiving and Christmas seasons found many a Civinette ringing doorbells for the purpose of selling fruitcakes, their annual fund-raising project. A Mother-Father Banquet and Christmas reunion were the highlights of the year's seasonal fun as old members got back together again. The Civinettes also made a few more children happy at Christmas time by joining in Project Santa Claus. The club performed at convalescent homes, did garden work, worked for the Dr. Wilson and United Fund Drives, and Tag Days, all of which require cooperation and enthusiasm from each member. Under the advice of Mrs. Brown and the planning of President Debbie Dixon, this year's Civinettes have had a notably successful year.

President Kenny Bradner and Advisor Captain Whiz Whisenant led the Exchange club through another successful year. Grimsley High School should bring back memories to all, especially to members of the Junior Exchange Club who very dutifully were in the auditorium every morning during their campaign to sell Grimsley T-shirts. T-shirt sales provided them with the funds to undertake other various projects. Most noteworthy was the adoption of a foreign child by the club. They devoted much time to school workdays, TAG days for the Cancer Fund and community works. It wasn't all work and no play for the members. Picnics and get-togethers with their sister club, the Exchangettes, were great for morale.

Whirlibird cages Bulldog in winning homecoming project

What have you always wanted to know about grammar, but were afraid to ask? The Exchangettes financed a book this year with all the answers, written, of course, by our notorious English Department. Another outstanding event, among this year's numerous activities, was the winning of the Homecoming Projects Award. They created a life-size Whirlibird guarding a penned-up Burlington Bulldog. In addition, the folks at Alonzo Hall Towers enjoyed entertainment by our Exchangettes, as did the retarded children who were treated to Easter and Christmas parties and games of Bingo, under the advice of Advisor Linda Tamblyn and President Nancy Patterson.

Hi-Y members do all sorts of "odd jobs" in their spare time to keep the money piled in their treasury.

Friendliness with everyone was the theme this year with Grimsley's Hi-Y. An offshoot of the YMCA, Hi-Y has striven for a better Greensboro for everyone. Concern for ecology, a main issue for Hi-Y, was demonstrated in the October sixteenth non-returnable bottle drive. President Jimmy Fogleman and Advisors Jim Latchiford and Larry Saunders helped organize various activities such as hayrides with its sister club, Y-Teens, school improvement and charity drives. At the Teenage Carnival last spring, approximately two thousand five hundred eggs were thrown at new members. And that was just the beginning of their membership!

Y-Teens repair toys for the GHS kindergarten

Y-Teens of Grimsley High School have not stopped all year in their striving for a better Greensboro. Monthly, they have visited the Greensboro Convalescent Home on a Sunday afternoon. They have made toys for the Cerebral Palsy School, as well as mending toys for the Grimsley kindergarten.

Between such services as Tag Days and the United Fund Drive, they have found time to enjoy the great outdoors. Bike-hikes and camping trips were staged as they followed the policies of the Young Women's Christian Association, their sponsoring club. Each of the members put in quite a few hours "green-thumbing it up" in their plot for the beautification of our school.

Interact exchanges Bart McMillan for Anders Hokholt

"So I sez to him, 'What difference is a little hair gonna make, eh, if it helps my club sell towels?' "

"And now Interact will dance its way into your heart with a little half-time hilarity . . ."

Most spectacular of Interact's projects this year was the trade of Interact member Barton McMillan for Anders Hokholt from Norway, another example of Interact's pledge to "provide opportunity for young men to work together in a world fellowship dedicated to service and international understanding." President Jupp Rice and advisor Morris Jeffreys have advised on other projects such as collecting money for the Cancer Crusade, leaf-raking, ushering at the Scout Jamboree, collecting $105 for Muscular Dystrophy, and a Christmas party with the Charioteers for Cone Hospital. Member Zane Leake shaved his head bald at the Student-Faculty game, where Interact sold towels.

Switchboard needs your support! Drug abuse is a serious problem in the minds of our GHS Charioteers, especially Susan Baucom, who was elected Chairman of Public Affairs at the annual Sub-Junior Convention. Fundraising has been the major concern this year. Their annual money-making project showed originality and talent, and a lot of hard work: an authentic fashion show was staged, sponsored by Laurie's. The girls were models, and door prizes were given away. Each member helped with such various projects as Tag Days, School Beautiful, tutoring, and public affairs. At the Teenage Carnival, members portrayed the backsides of elephants and were the targets of water balloons. President Mary Norelius and Advisors Miss Hambright and Mrs. Hudson have helped to make this a worthwhile year.

Spirit — that's the Junior Jaycees of GHS. They're proving it here and abroad in the community. Guess-the-Whirlibird is the annual contest sponsored by the Jaycees. Their attentions were not limited to sports, however. They wind up their activities every spring by presenting a $300 scholarship to some deserving senior. While strolling around the greens at the GGO last spring, one might have noticed some hard-working Junior Jaycees helping make sure that the event went off without a hitch. Advisor Seldon Patty and Sam Sparrow, president, led the members successfully through paper recycling, light bulb sales and Tag days for all kinds of worthwhile charities.

Junior Jaycees can't resist a bit of "jest horsing around a wee might". Oh, well, it keeps them from stealing hubcaps.

Jaycettes run concession stands at tennis and swim meets

The Junior Jaycettes, who "work for the betterment of Greensboro", again sponsored a "Miss Christmas Seal" candidate and raised money for respiratory diseases. Other fall activities included caring for a needy family by providing a Thanksgiving and a Christmas meal for them, along with a tree and gifts. They also worked selling programs at the GGO this spring, and selling refreshments at tennis matches and swim meets throughout the city. At the Teenage Carnival, the Jaycettes ran a dart board and a balloon game.

Amid all their community activities, they also found time to give the teachers' lounge a thorough cleaning every month and sell food and drinks at games. All under the advisement of Miss Sandra Schiffley and President Eileen McFalls.

Jaycettes cheerfully collect for the March of Dimes on one of their numerous tag days.

Key Club enriches man's ecological environment

Christmas is for everyone, so Key Club opened the door to happiness for many a needy family. Trick-or-treaters were furnished with escorts at Halloween, and Mom and Dad were reassured at a Parents' Appreciation Banquet. Here at school, the guys had no trouble locating the chicks, thanks to the Key Club Directory. Freshly painted benches greeted returning students last fall as proof of Key Club's goal to build a better community. Extra ecology efforts were put forth as club members swept the stadium and recycled paper. Marathon basketball games provided funds for the Switchboard Crisis Control Center.

It isn't all work and no play, however, as Key Club and OHJ members got together for a hayride. They also jointly worked a booth at the Teenage Carnival for pie-throwing. Thanks to the fine Grimsley Key Club, John Glass was elected lieutenant governor of this division. President John Shields and advisors Mr. A. Kivett, Mr. R. H. Spence, Mr. H. H. Price, and Mr. H. C. Ferguson have made this a very outstanding year.

As club members from Grimsley look on, Mayor Jim Melvin issues a proclamation declaring Key Club International Week in Greensboro.

Volleyball, anyone? Any O. Henry Junior would gladly accept the challenge since they came out on top among the girls' service clubs intramurals in 1970-71. Riding bikes for ecology was along the outdoorsy side, as well as being targets for pies at the Teenage Carnival with Key Club, all of which makes for an O. Henry Junior that is never bored. The members enjoy it as they work for "service, fun, and friendship." The O. Henry Juniors' sophisticated side shone through as they assumed the mammoth task of being hostesses for the State Jamboree for The Federation of Women's Clubs. They did well as school beautifiers and collectors of toys, books, and clothing for the Gold Door Project. The wit and advice of Mrs. Reese, faculty advisor, along with the assistance of Mrs. H. D. Kellett, Mrs. G. Murray, and President Kirt Rendleman made racking up points fun as well as worthwhile for our Grimsley O. Henry Juniors, sponsored by the Greensboro O. Henry Women's Club.

Individual talents play an important role when Optimists "take it off

Optimists at Grimsley are very heavy on the individual. One f'rinstance is their highly successful strip show at the Teenage Carnival last spring where members dressed as girls, with the added effects of music and strobes. One of the main events of the year is always the Optimist-sponsored Student-Faculty game. This year, it was played on November 19th, when the faculty was graciously allowed to beat the obviously superior students.

President Mark Walser, Advisor Lee Jessen, and Optimist members worked hard for Muscular Dystrophy, a Christmas Tree sale, and a clothing drive.

"we try harder," Sub-Juniors proclaim

In spite of frustrations, cooperation produces an interesting Homecoming project.

What have advisors Mrs. Mary Floyce Sigmon and Mrs. Ann Riley, along with President Susan Austin of the Sub-Junior Club, been doing this year? A fantastic job! Their services have ranged from UNICEF, and Tag Days to a drug forum and Festival One, their main projects. They trick-or-treated for UNICEF, as well as sold UNICEF Christmas cards. They participated in their annual State-wide Jamboree, held in Greensboro last summer. A scholarship was made possible when Sub-Juniors served as waitresses at a benefit bridge party. Sub-Juniors also helped raise some of the funds necessary for the Jody Thompson Fund, for a little boy who was desperately in need of heart surgery.

Special recognition goes to Jackie Descouzis, who was voted Youth-of-the-Month back in the fall.

There are still some traditions left; and Sub-Juniors is proving that such traditions as making people a little happier are long-lasting traditions.

UNIFIED WHOLE

"... were to become one — a unified whole ..."

One might divide the members of our mosaic
Into three castes of athletes: the good, the Average, and the underachievers.
The good are those impressive superstars
Who do everything from golf to basketball
With effortless ease.
The average are not really bad—they just
are not good. They survive gym class,
But are not meant for the Olympics.
As for the underachievers—forget it! To them,
A basket is for peaches, not balls, and
Calisthenics equal the plague.
During gym, the good dominate with graceful
Skill and flexed biceps, the average are in Awe, and the underachievers retreat to the Showers.

But good, average or underachiever, the usual
"Mosaic-er" is a true rooter of our beloved
Grimsley cause—winning.
We may not often show it (we are the silent Types), but if anyone is to win, we
Reason it might as well be us.
We endure hard concrete benches, numb
Fingers and toes, crowded gyms, and gum
On splintery bleachers.
And in our experience, we have learned
A great lesson: It is honorable to lose,
But winning is even better.

In the high jump event, sophomore Ray Coble (above) clears the bar to stay in the competition.

Although Grimsley was winless in track last year, outstanding individual performers caused opponents to view the Whirlies with respect. Leading the team was senior Joe Browder, who was undefeated in the mile run during the regular season and set school records in both the mile (4:18.6) and two-mile (9:36.6) races. He captured first place in all of the big meets — the Conference, Sectional, City-County, Western Regional, and Mid-South Relays. He climaxed the season by winning the State Championship in the mile. Competing with the best high school runners in the southeastern United States, Joe finished second in the Southern Track Classic in Knoxville, Tennessee, and also the Atlanta Track Classic in Atlanta.

There were several underclassmen who also performed well for the Whirlies. Juniors Lucky Anderson and Mike Bailey dominated the two-mile all season. Anderson won the Guilford-Forsyth two-mile race with a 9:55.2, while Bailey qualified for the Western Regional with a 10:05. Grimsley's mile relay team of sophomore Charles Broadway, junior Alan Sienkiewicz, senior Dick Schwartz, and junior Randy Dixon was the finest the Whirlies have fielded in four years. Three sophomores showing much promise were Gil Vance, Keith Macdonald, and Danny Wilson. Vance was fifth in the Western Regional discus (145 ft.), Macdonald tied for third in the Guilford-Forsyth pole vault, and Wilson finished sixth in the Conference Meet 880.

The team competed in several post-season meets, too — the City County, the Western Regional, the Guilford-Forsyth, and the Sectional. Nine members of the team also took part in the final post-season meet, the Junior Olympics. Here Gil Vance climaxed his season with a first in the discus event in his division.

Chip Stam leads 1971 tennis team to 10-2 record

The Grimsley 1971 tennis team displayed a wide range of talent and versatility. Ten wins were recorded against only two losses, which made the team sectional champion and conference runner-up. Repeating his performance from last year, Chip Stam was the number one man in the singles with Steve Vaughan, a sophomore last year, a close second. Stam earned two outstanding positions; Conference Champion and Sectional Champion. Unfortunately, during the State Tournament, Stam was defeated. Don Drakeman and Steve Vaughan took top honors in the State Tournament with Andy Sykes and Stuart Gordon being the Conference Doubles Champions.

The tennis team also had other talented men, most of them new to Grimsley last year. These players gained experience and pride by playing on the team, and because they will largely compose the 1971 and 1972 tennis team, a similar record will be likely.

GHS golf team takes 2nd place in the conference

Coach Jamieson and his 1971 golf team proved to be tough competitors despite the loss of many players as a result of the bussing and graduation. Melvin Miller led the group in the six season matches to four second places, one first, and one third. Miller took low honors in the first match of the season with a 75. Grimsley placed second in this match to Page, who provided the stiffest competition for the Whirlies during the season. The second time the two schools met, Grimsley defeated their Page rivals and captured first place. A third place and three second places followed, giving the Whirlies a record which put them second in the Conference at the close of the regular season. Grimsley latched on to this second place standing by taking that position in the Conference Tournament. This qualified the team to take part in the Sectional Tournament where they took fourth place. Leading the Whirlies in this match was Ted Sanders, who took low honors with a rare score of 69, his season low.

Pitcher Greg Ward (above) contributes to the Whirlies quest for victory and the State Championship. JV baseball coach Barbour (right) observes his team's performance during a close game.

Last spring's baseball team, although lacking in batting strength, made use of their talent in the field and charged their way to a 13-4 over-all record and the state championship.

Under the guidance of coach McKeel, the Whirlies first played five pre-season games, beating Dudley, Page, and Burlington while losing to Smith and High Point. The team then began their regular season games and got off to a fine start by downing Page and Dudley. Next came the only losses of the regular season when Grimsley played High Point and then Smith, losing both games by a score of 3-4. The last seven games of the regular season were victories for the Whirlies, most of these being close contests where one point meant the difference between a win and a loss or tie.

With a 9-2 record, Grimsley went against Raleigh in the division play-offs and conquered the Caps 2-1. Against Mecklinberg for the State Championship, the Whirlies won the first game in a series which would end when one team won two of the three games. Grimsley captured the State Championship in the next game by defeating Mecklenburg 9-2. Congratulations to the coaches and team on a job well-done.

Setting new records along the way, the talented members of the 1971 cross country team ran by all competitors, taking first-place honors in six regular season meets. They went on to win three post-season meets that established them as state champions, an honor won by Grimsley only once before.

Lucky Anderson led the field of runners throughout the year, taking five first-place finishes and setting a new record on Grimsley's course. The old record, set last year by Joe Browder, was topped by nineteen seconds.

After regular season ended, the unbeaten Whirlies sent their six top runners to the conference meet. The six — Anderson, Bailey, Rushton, Sieknkiewicz, Tingen, and Wilson — won here, and went on to the sectional meet at Duke. Winning by a large margin, they next went to Chapel Hill for the final race of the year, the state meet. They left with a second consecutive state championship.

Grimsley's JV football team demonstrates individual talent

Punter Brad Ashley sails a kick over the outstretched arm of a Smith player (above).

Despite the disappointing 2-7 record sported by the JV football team, Grimsley does have promising players coming in the near future. Quarterback Brad Ashley has shown that he has a good arm, and ends Ben Rogers and Bill Thomas have demonstrated the ability to field Ashley's passes with consistency. Ashley was the "everything" man who played many positions on the field, ranging from quarterback to defensive half. Other players worth noting are Jim Jones, Alan Wilson, Jay Shoffner, Joe Albright, and Mike Iddings, the latter a huge 195 pound sophomore that looks very good at his tackle position.

A possible explanation for the frustrating season was the loss of thirteen starters during the course of the year. The JV's were hurt when four outstanding players — Steve Sanders, Tom Nelson, Mike Shaver, and Dwight Perkins — were moved up to the varsity. Injuries and bad grades took their toll also.

Grimsley's first football game of the 1971 season was a promising 14-3 win over Raleigh Broughton, the 1971 state champs. Charles Lindsay's two long runs (85 and 96 yards) highlighted this game, although one was called back. Lindsay had another long one called back in the following game, against Durham, but the Whirlies still outscored the Bulldogs 13-12.

After experiencing a three-game losing streak, GHS then hosted the game of the year. The bitter rivalry between the Whirlies and the Page Pirates was evident in this heated contest. Lindsay again proved himself as he intercepted a pass and turned it into a touchdown, then caught a fourteen-yard pass to set up the second score. The game resulted in a 16-8 victory for GHS. Four games remained, and although none of these were wins, two of them were within three points, demonstrating that Grimsley's new wishbone offense obviously has promise.

With energy, verve, and patience GHS Cheerleaders lift morale

The epitome of scintillating school spirit and vigor, the twelve GHS cheerleaders ignited morale at all football and basketball games. Patiently bearing bumpy bus trips to games outside of Greensboro, several games that were only sparsely attended, and a few snowy evenings, the girls managed to shake their pompoms energetically and scream themselves hoarse.

Because of the new desegregation plan, cheerleader auditions were not held last spring. Instead, girls were selected in the fall on a basis giving fair representation to both black and whites.

The girls sold Whirlie buttons for their fund-raising project and attended two sports banquets honoring coaches, players, and the cheerleaders themselves.

School spirit is coaxed from GHS by hard working Pep Board

Toting one's Teddy Bear lovingly from class to class, wearing a dashing (if not authentic) Bonnie and Clyde costume, modeling an oversized cowboy Stetson, and trying to look like the weirdest weirdo on the campus for Weirdo Day were only a few of the disparate activities that the Pep Board incited students to do, by way of showing school loyalty before a game. Reverting to juvenile tendencies not only was fun, but also sparked more interest in athletic events.

Headed by Pam Carlson and Jupp Rice, the Pep Board included various committees that painted posters and performed skits at pep rallies. To further stimulate student interest, Jupp often presented an imaginative monologue or a dialogue at announcements to promote an upcoming game.

Chambers leads GHS to 18-4 season with his 21.7 average

Grimsley's basketball team boasted a fine record for the 1971-72 season, winning eighteen of their twenty-two regular and post-season games. The regular season was seven games old before the Whirlies suffered their first defeat, losing by a slim four points to Lynchburg. Grimsley bounced back from their loss to win five more games, boosting their record to 12-1.

Bill Chambers, with two years of starting experience behind him, was joined by four new starters to form the nucleus of this year's team. The outgoing talent and effort exemplified by every player was molded together by Coach Jamieson into a unified team.

The last seven games gave five more wins to GHS, as they lost to High Point and Burlington Williams, but avenged both losses later.

Shortly after the regular season ended, Grimsley and five other teams met to battle out the District Tournament. After earning a bye in the first round of the tournament, the Whirlies played High Point to a close 54-51 win. The victory earned the team a place in the championship game, faced for the second straight year against Burlington Williams. In the exciting game, the Whirlies ended their season, bowing to the Bulldogs, 58-66.

With winning season, JV basketball teams show great promise

Both JV basketball teams, like the varsity produced winning records in the 1971-72 basketball season. The JV-A's were undefeated in their sixteen games and again went to the junior varsity central 4-A championship to meet the Bulldogs of Burlington Williams. Last year Williams beat the A's by a few points, but this year the team won with a runaway victory.

Leading the JV-A team were juniors David Stevens and Vernon Shanks, two players who consistently aided the team with their accurate shooting. Alan Irvin and Buddy Mills were two other starters who also helped the team win constantly.

The JV-B team shows what GHS has coming in the future as they ended the season with fourteen wins and three losses. Charles Smith and Danny High were the two players who led the B team and were largely responsible for the fine record. This team was composed completely of sophomores and, as they will be the varsity team in two years, they insure Grimsley of continued power in basketball.

Swimmers take state championship for eighth straight time

GHS proved their swimming talent was well-balanced as they took place in regional competition meets involving from thirty-three to seventy-four teams. The swimmers took first in the Southeast Invitational meet against seventy-three other teams. Another first was rewarded when they swam in the Southern Interscholastics against thirty-two other schools: public, private, and military. Against forty-five schools in the Atlantic Seaboard Meet at Chapel Hill, Grimsley took second. The only loss in a dual meet came against the JV team of N.C. State.

The season was climaxed with the winning of the state championship for the eighth straight time, and many swimmers placed well in this meet. Tom Berry and James Tingen successfully defended their state titles in swimming and diving, respectively.

Outstanding individuals lead wrestling team to 8-9 season

Coach Barbour's 1972 wrestling team, composed mostly of sophomores, showed fantastic promise in their seventeen season matches. The record of eight wins and nine losses is somewhat misleading as the team won their last four matches, and several of the wrestlers placed well in the post-season matches.

Senior David Neese, returning from a fine junior year of wrestling, again showed his ability by placing first in the sectional. In the state match, Neese was eliminated in the quarter finals, but had proved himself a tough competitor in the 195-pound class. Lucky Anderson (134 pounds) got started late because of a foot injury, but still placed second in the sectional and fifth in the state. A few outstanding sophomores are Rodney James (98 pounds), Tom Nelson (135), and Alan Wilson (154), the latter which placed third in the sectional. With this new power, GHS can obviously look forward to more fine wrestling seasons.

Whirling Boots entertain at halftime of January Cougar game

At halftime of a basketball game, Whirling Boots perform their latest routine.

Attired in immaculate white from the crowns of their top hats to the toes of gleaming boots, the Whirling Boots on the football field and on the basketball court executed their routines with ease. But to gain this assurance and excellence of performance, the girls often had to spend as many as five afternoons a week practicing for the next game. In the boys' gym after school, the group perfected old dance numbers and fearlessly tried new ones, under the direction of choreographer Mickey Garrett.

October marked the auditions for new Boot members. Competing for the fifteen openings, one hundred girls demonstrated how high they could kick and how well they could do the required steps. After much teamwork, the group presented routines at four home football games. In addition to entertaining at many of the GHS basketball games, the girls also flashed their boots during halftime at a Cougar basketball game in January. Chocolate bars were sold to buy new uniform accessories.

GAA sells toothbrushes as money-making project of the year

With its annual fall picnic for new members, the Girls' Athletic Association kicked off its busy agenda. After this informal meal, their fingers a little sticky from fried chicken and chocolate cake, the girls gathered in the GHS girls' gym to do what they as a group like best — enjoying sports.

To further promote the fun of athletic events, GAA frequently held activity nights at school. At these, members met for two hours for a variety of games, mainly basketball, and for refreshments. Also the club planned a camping trip this spring.

Other projects helped to keep GAA members active. For November's homecoming game, the club entered a float for the second year. Later in the month, members sold toothbrushes to buy new basketball uniforms. The girls greeted the Christmas season with a lively party and ended the year with a party for senior members.

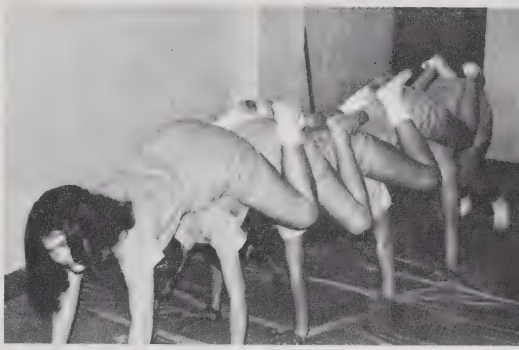
Cold fall weather, left, is one incentive to run energetically in field hockey. Below, girls' phys. ed. class demonstrates one of a variety of tumbling routines taken up in class.



Archery and tumbling are two of many sports offered at GHS

Practicing her archery skills, Patti Simpson aims her arrow at the bull's eye.

Running track in sweater and baggy gym suit in forty-five-degree weather and retrieving a tennis ball hit deep into a clump of bushes were only a few of the girls' activities. Other not-soon-to-be-forgotten memories include the frequently drenched condition of the clay tennis courts, the misplaced cans of deodorant, the crowdedness of the dressing room, the fast-moving basketball games, the exhilerating feeling after a good game of tennis, and the prudent taking home of one's gym suit and accessories every Friday.

This year the emphasis in girls' physical education classes was on tennis, track and field events, volleyball, basketball, and field hockey. By participating in these sports, the girls, in general, improved their coordination and learned the value of cooperation and good sportsmanship. Some untimely pop tests and written tests at the end of each six weeks assessed the girls' knowledge of each sport.

For those girls whose athletic appetites were not satisfied by the basic diet of the required physical education course, there were four extracurricular teams to join — golf, tennis, basketball, and swimming. With such stars as Patti Simpson and Kathy Heinen, the swimming team received many awards. The basketball team also was rather successful, with a 10-4 record at presstime, and the 1971 tennis team won four out of six matches. The golf team brought glory to itself in the fall state tournament, in which the team placed first and Kathy Sinopoli was awarded a trophy for the lowest score.

PARTICLES

". . . a multitude of particles."

Before the school bus finally arrived,
The morning rain had soaked two books,
A book report, and the head of a
Typical member of our mosaic.
"What a rotten day!" thought he, as the Big orange bus bumped around the Corner and ground to a mud-spattering
Stop.
His omnious prediction proved correct,
Beginning with his fight to conquer
A seat from his bellicose fellow
Bus riders, he fought all day.
His was a losing battle. He knocked his Chem experiment into the sink and
Watched the acid and his grade
Flow away.
He forgot his history report: "Martha
Washington's Gastrometric Tastes,"
And he was expelled from study hall
For his misbehavior.
He had the misfortune of dining in our
Own cafeteria; in fact, he had misgivings
When the aroma from the kitchen
Wilted the flowers on his tie.
Suspecting ptomaine poisioning from his
Lunch, he became so upset that he fell
Asleep, his snores keeping everyone
Else awake.
Yes, his day was as cold and as
Miserable as the cold and miserable rain
Drizzling on a cold and miserable world.
But at day's end, someone gave our boy
A soothing word, and he rejoiced, for
Often people can light the dark.

Sophomores disprove myth of their naiveness

The traditional comic stereotype of a Grimsley soph is a creature short in stature and equally short in brain power. Before he enters high school, this mythical character is rumored to gape in awe when even considering the unknown terrors of Grimsley. During his first few weeks as a Whirlie fledgling, he (according to legend) commits such blunders as going to class in the vocational building instead of the science building (a good five minutes away) and innocently believes the old-elevator-to-the-third-floor joke.

Of course, this caricature is not a real Grimsley sophomore— and never has been. This story has been even less true this year.

Late August, 1971, found the sophomores coming together on registration day for the first time as a class. Due to the Greensboro public schools new desegregation plan, some sophomores who had planned to attend Dudley, Page and Smith, under the freedom of choice, were sent to Grimsley. Naturally, this proved to be disappointing.

But the sophs did a beautiful job in acclimating themselves— at least to the extent that school ran smoothly. They settled down to the things GHS sophomores have been doing for ages: making cardboard planes and triangles for geometry, really 'getting into' frogs in biology, creating tense moments in drivers' training cars, selling pencils for the class project and getting involved in clubs and in elections.

Journal of a GHS Junior

December, 1971

First semester's almost over (thank heavens!) and I'm glad Christmas is almost here. To be truthful, though, first semester has been pretty good — so far. Most of my friends managed to get back to good ol' GHS, and I got more involved in clubs than I did last year. I got my class ring last week, and I'm really proud to wear it. Now I really feel like a part of Grimsley. I took the PSAT in November; it was harder than I expected, but I did all right. So far I've even managed to stay awake during American History.

Among the minuses of this semester are chemistry (I'm no Louis Pasteur) and the fact that we've had only a few assemblies, because the auditorium was under construction.

May, 1972

The end of the year is in sight — cheers! I've really enjoyed this year, despite all the book reports, research papers, miscellaneous homework, SAT's, etc. We juniors staged the play Up the Down Staircase as a class project and it was a success; I was on the make-up committee.

We juniors are also planning the Senior Prom, which will be next week — and you'll never guess who I'm going with! Best of all, I'm passing everything and so when I return to GHS next year, I'll finally be a glorious senior.

Greta Grimsley

Chapter One

The Beginning

August 27, 1969. Greta Grimsley, a sweet yet simple-minded sophomore, approached Grimsley Senior High School for registration, fear in her quaking heart.

"I can't go on," said she, clasping her hands. "But," she added in a brave whisper, "I must."

Thus emboldened, she entered the main building, became lost in the milling mob inside, and had to be rerouted to the auditorium by a condescending senior. Except for this incident and the fact that she could not find her way back to the parking lot, she thought that no one would have ever guessed this to be her first day.

Greta had a very "sophomorish" year. The upperclassmen tormented her and her fellow underclassmen with the same stale elevator jokes that a long-ago "cat's pajamas" originated in 1929. She drew and quartered amphibious creatures in biology, finally learned to differentiate the second from the third floor of the main building, and brought bicarbonate of soda and/or an antidote for poisoning every time she ventured into the cafeteria. She even passed geometry.

Chapter Two

The Middle

August 26, 1970. Greta approached GHS with none of the stomach-churning apprehension that she had felt on August 27, 1969. The beginning of my junior year, thought she. Ah, the joys of not being a sophomore! (The reader might interpolate here that Greta G. was now a woman of the world).

Her junior year began quickly. The ordering of rings, the resuming of club activities after the summer hiatus, first term papers, vain attempts to sell the junior class play tickets to suspicious sophomores, and PSATS (a trying initiation for the forthcoming SATS) were some of the events that occupied Greta and her classmates' time.

Schoolwork proved to be the pit in Greta's plum. Chemistry was a major crisis, especially on lab days. The science building was in peril whenever she was conducting an experiment; her crowning feat was the time she inadvertently set fire to some sulfur, thereby asphyxiating the entire class.

Greta also struggled through log tables, scarlet letters, parlez-vous-francais-ing, and FDR's endless list of New Deal bills. Somehow, she passed.

Even though she never learned to use a slide rule, Greta learned one important fact: she was now a real part of Grimsley. Her school was old, its walls seamed with cracks, furniture scarred, floors uneven; yet she loved it.

Chapter Three

The Beginning of the End

August 25, 1971. Greta approached GHS as a confident senior who anticipated the most perfect year of her school career. She and her fellow seniors were enjoying the option of remaining at the school they had attended as juniors, as provided under Greensboro's new court-ordered desegregation plan. She was happy and relieved to be back.

Slightly bored with high school, Greta and most of the seniors now wished the year to go by quickly. Slowly, too slowly, the bright autumn froze into dull winter which at long last melted into the warm aliveness of spring.

Chapter Four

The End

A blue-robed Greta Grimsley cocked one eye and stared petuantly at the tassel dangling from her mortarboard. What a hot, hot night! She twirled the tassel around her finger. The folds of the long graduation gown stuck to her, making her feel more uncomfortable.

Graduation night. The last hour of high school. Most of the speakers were pounding the same thing across to the graduate — the usual business about "and in the hands of you young people lies tomorrow's future" et al. Greta rearranged herself in her chair and listened to part of the address politely. Then she glanced around at the rows and rows of blue figures, her classmates. They all looked as hot as she.

Her first few days of school were ones of premature nostalgia; everything she did was "something to remember forever" as a reminder of "the good ol' days." But soon the nostalgia was lost in the homework, in the term papers, in the tests. And then there were colleges to worry over — Carolina? Duke? Wake Forest? . . . ah, sure, thought G.G. in her gloomier moods, and how about Vassar and Smith? I'll be lucky to end up in some tiny college set in a lush Mid-west cornfield.

She and the other seniors renewed their spirits by chanting "One hundred and fifty-one days to go, a hundred and fifty days . . ." Morale was also boosted by Grimsley's winning the Page football game — the first time in several years.

Graduation may be the time for reflection, but Greta could only concentrate on the fact that soon she and her classmates would be scattered. Well, during her three years at Grimsley, she had had a good time, had learned something, and had spiritually matured.

Finally she received her diploma, her first major accomplishment in life, the foundation of future achievements.

The Class of 1972 sang the Alma Mater. Then it was all over. Greta had finally graduated.

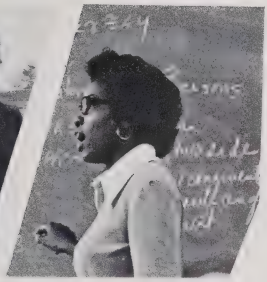
Grimsley's essence captured in our mosaic, we pause to express our thanks to those who helped . . .



WHIRLIGIG 1972 is complete. The staff must now pause to consider the goals we set for ourselves. We wished to capture the essence of Grimsley on these pages — its variety, its individuality, its common spirit. We wished to unify all its infinite number of elements in this one volume in which the goodness lingers on. If we have shown the mosaic of an ever-changing school, if we have succeeded in creating one impression from a multitude of particles, then we have achieved our goal.

All that WHIRLIGIG 1972 is, we owe to the valuable aid of many people. These people have given of themselves that the bits of our mosaic could become one. We owe our appreciation to:

Mr. Malcolm Miller of Martin's Studio
Mr. Carol Martin of Martin's Studio
Mr. Frank Fleming of Delmar Printing Co.
Mr. Bruce Bittick of Delmar Printing Co.
Mrs. Lorene Fairfax of Delmar Printing Co.
Mrs. Betty Hand at Meyer's
Mr. Garland Gentry of School Pictures, Inc.

And finally to Miss Virginia Powell, whose dedication and enthusiasm inspired us to do our duty with enjoyment as fully as she has done hers.
